Scoring And Interpreting The Learning Styles Questionnaire

The Questionnaire is scored by awarding one point for each ticked item. There are no points for unticked items. Simply indicate on the lists below which items were ticked by circling the appropriate question number.

Scoring Key

To derive your interpersonal orientation scores refer to the table below. Note that there are six columns: each with items and keys. Each column refers to an interpersonal need listed in the chart at the bottom of the page. Items in the column refer to question numbers on the questionnaire. Keys refer to answers on each of those items. If you answered an item using any of the alternatives in the corresponding key column, circle the item number on this sheet.

When you have checked all of the items for a single column, count up the number of circled items and place that number in the corresponding box in the chart. These numbers will give you your strength of interpersonal need in each of the six areas. The highest possible score is 9. The lowest score is 0.

THOMAS-KILMANN CONFLICT MODES: Interpreting Your Scores

Your profile of scores indicates the repertoire of conflict handling skills that you possess and use in conflict situations. One of the most often asked questions is "What are the right answers?" In this type of test, there are no "right" answers. All five modes of handling conflict are useful in various situations, and each represents a set of useful social skills. The effectiveness of any handling of conflict depends on the requirements of the conflict and the skill that is employed.

Each of us is capable of using all five conflict modes, and none of us can be characterized as having a single rigid style of dealing with conflict. However, because of personality traits or by habit, individuals tend to use one or two modes at a greater frequency than the others.

The information on the last page may help you judge how appropriately you use the five methods of conflict resolution.
